Editorial By ALEX. H. WASHBURN

AS THE lists close on the submission of projects for federal work funds Hempstead county asks $100,000 for the control of soil erosion. In an agricultural country this is a life-or-death matter—all the more terrible because the effects of erosion are as slow, but as relentless, as the effects of human heredity.

Two generations ago Americans would wear out the farmland of one section and then move on to virgin prairie farther west.

A generation ago this movement was slowing up.

Today it has stopped altogether.

There are no more unclaimed virgin public lands—and for the future the American farmer must look to the job of rebuilding and protecting that land which he now has.

It is a task never yet fully attempted by Americans. Always we have been pioneers—and looters, whether of timber, or minerals, or soil. But the looting days are ever. Today we have to rebuild slowly but patiently where we now stand—and in that rebuilding process the control of soil erosion comes first, for an agricultural country.

We do not want our America to become a land of barren slopes and flooded valleys—a land of drouth and famine—such as China has become.

And the way to prevent that is to regulate the cutting down of our forests, whose roots retain moisture, and to guard against the washing away of top-soil through the seasonal rains. That is truly important in a section like our own, where the average annual rainfall is 45 to 50 inches—second heaviest in America.

Dispatches from Washington today tell us that if the World war veterans push President Roosevelt to a showdown on immediate payment of the bonus certificates the president may require the American Legion and other veterans' associations to pledge that if this payment is made there will be no demand for veterans' pensions in the years to come.

This is the impasse toward which we have been drifting.

No honest newspaper editor, no honest public adviser of any kind, could support a proposal to pay the bonus under such terms.

Personally, this writer, himself a member of the American Legion, is out of sympathy with the bonus demand. A great many legionnaires feel the same way about it—but there is no use stirring up a local feud in every community, for men naturally divide on an issue like this.

The reason I personally am opposed to payment of the bonus is twofold:

First, the late C. L. Bodenhamer, one-time commander of the American Legion, always felt it was a disgrace that able-bodied men should demand cash for themselves while the widows and orphans of their late comrades went unprovided for. It is my understanding that to this good day the widows and orphans of the veterans of every war except the World war are provided for.

It was Bodenhamer's idea, after payment of the first half of the bonus, to halt matters there until the widows and orphans had been taken care of.

But they haven't been taken care of—and all the yowling of Congressman Fatman of Texarkana for cash for able-bodied men, is rapidly doing those widows and orphans no good.

In this matter we have got to put first things first.

President Roosevelt made that statement his watch-word from the beginning.

And I think he is right in this controversy, too.

X X X

The former soldiers have available during this period of hard times all the federal and local help that other citizens have.

They have in the future the clear right to demand special soldiers' pensions at the hands of the central government which in 1918 called them away to war.

But that they should sign away that right, simply because they are a powerful minority vote and can perhaps force the issue over the president, I do not admit.

It is against the men's own interest—they are proposing to sacrifice their own personal future for present-day cash—and it is certainly against the nation's interest, for no matter what the men promise they will still have a moral claim against the government in their old age.

I am not in politics—therefore I can write this.

And if some of our so-called public leaders—notably some congressmen—had told the truth to the men from the beginning, they would be losing less sleep today.

All things are possible when we "put first things first"—but when we do otherwise we only run into trouble.

$135,000 in Work Projects Asked by Hempstead County

$100,000 Alone Sought From U. S. for Soil Erosion Control

3 DRAINAGE JOBS

Propose to Halt Degeneration of Top-Soil, Saving Fertile Farms

Five additional projects for Hempstead county, totaling $135,000, have been turned in for consideration by the State Planning Board as suggested federal public works, by County Judge H. M. Stephens.

These will be added to the $400,000 worth of suggested projects previously submitted for the City of Hope and the county, including $150,000 for coun highways.

Deadline for the filing of suggested projects with the local FERA office was to be Friday night.

The greatest of the new projects submitted strictly for the county is a soil erosion control program, estimated to cost $100,000. It would apply to 50,000 acres in every section of Hempstead, preserving fertil top-soil from being washed off the slopes and into the bottomland—halting the process which from one generation to another gradually causes one-rich farmland to become known as "worn out."

The other four county projects are:

Draining and streightening of Ozan creek from the end of the project already submitted by the town of Ozan, to the Little Missouri river, a distance of six miles, at an estimated cost of $16,000. This would protect farmland from overflow.

Another overflow project is the clearing and dredging of the channel of Little Missouri river for drainage, a distance of 16 miles, cost estimated to be $13,000.

The fourth project is the draining of Pondrum lake, near Nashville, but in this county, estimated to cost $3,500.

The fifth project is a canning kitchen and work house, with equipment, at McCaskill, said to be the only town in the county without a community kitchen, estimated cost $2,500.

Postmaster Shot at Waldo Friday

B. T. Jarnigan May Die of Self-Inflicted Gunshot Wound

WALDO, Ark.—Byron T. Jarnigan, about 30, postmaster at Waldo, shot himself, through the head in the bathroom of his home early Friday. He is not expected to live.

His wife and two children were eating breakfast in the home when the shot was fired.

A nervous breakdown was said to have been responsible for Jarnigan's act. Friends said Jarnigan had been despondent for several days.

It was reported that Jarnigan had been worried greatly during the past week by applicants for the position of assistant postmaster, left vacant recently by the death of Charles Clark.

Bonus May Bar Pensions for Future

Roosevelt Likely to Exact Pledge If Issue Is Pressed

Work Relief Program Approaches Crucial Test Vote in Senate

SPLIT IN TWO PARTS

880-Million Direct Relief Is One—4-Billion Work Program, Other

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Leaders in congress said Friday that if the veterans press for immediate payment of the bonus President Roosevelt plans to insist that they yield all claims to new pension benefits in the future.

A leader who declined to be quoted by name at present, said the president remarked that even though such a bargain might not actually be binding in the future it would constitute at least a moral deterrent to new demands.

Relief Vote Test Near

The administration's work relief program Friday approached its first big senate test—a motion which would speed passage of 880 million dollars for direct relief but would leave the 4-billion-dollar work-giving fund to the doubtful future.

The outcome is expected by Democratic leaders to provide a major indication of just how the bill will journey in the senate.

Republican ranks promised a motion to cut one year off the time the huge relief fund will be available for spending.

Long Hits Farley

At Senator Long's request the senate asked Secretary Ickes to furnish all reports of the Department of the Interior's investigators referring to Postmaster General Farley.

Legislation to protect the United States from foreign "propaganda" and revolutionary activity was recommended to congress by a house committee which spent more than a year investigating "un-American" activities.

The committee report charged, in effect, that Soviet Russia has violated its pledge against harboring groups which advocate the overthrow of this government.

Relief Bill Assailed

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Greeted in the senate by harsh words, the president's $4,800,000,000 work - relief bill Thursday night faced prolonged debate.

Assailing particularly the wide powers granted the president under the measure, Senator Steiwer, Republican, Oregon, shouted that there were "no restrictions" on the executive, and Senator Long, Democrat, Louisiana, added:

"This isn't a relief bill, this is a boodle bill."

A movement was started among both Republican and Democratic senators to recommit the big bill to the senate appropriations committee from which it had just emerged after a three week's buffeting, with instructions that only the $880,000,000 for relief should be reported for immediate consideration.

The move appeared likely to break into the open Friday. Senator McCarran, Democrat, Nevada, said he would move to recommit it if no one else did.

Efforts by Chairman Glass of the Appropriations Committee to gain immediate formal consideration of the relief bill failed in the senate when Senator McNary of Oregon, Republican leader objected on the ground that more time was needed to study the measure.

Nevertheless, debate was begun with Senator Steiwer, a member of the Appropriations Committee, charging the measure "contains evils almost beyond description" due, he asserted, to "limitless discretion given the president."

Steiwer asserted administration witnesses before the committee "admitted" that the measure was drafted in order "ont to permit any legal restraint" on how the president was to handle the money.

Senator Johnson, California Republican independent, who usually has backed Roosevelt measures strongly said:

"I can't visualize any set of circumstances in which the money cannot be used under the measure."

Identity of Negro Robber Is Learned

The identity of a negro prowler who was routed by former County Judge L. F. Higgason Wednesday night became known Friday as a police search for the negro continued.

The ex-county judge recognized the negro while the two fought over possession of a gun. The negro's name was not made public, pending the police search for him.

Friends Turn on Kennamer as Case Closes for State

Former Pals Tell Pawnee (Okla.) Court of Threats by Accused

THE "BLACK SHEEP"

Federal Judge's Son Is Termed One "Mistake" of Prominent Family

PAWNEE, Okla.(AP)—Former friends Thursday accused Phil Kennamer, son of a federal judge, as the state ended its murder case against him.

Two former pals and a casual acquaintance have told of the 19-year-old Kennamer's fury against John F. Gorrell Jr., 23, whom he has admitted killing, and of his plan—announced, they said, days before Gorrell was found shot to death—to kill the dental student because he allegedly planne dto harm Miss Virginia Wilcox, 19.

Kennamer surrendered two days after Gorrell's body, shot twice through the head with his own pistol, was found in an exclusive Tulsa residential section Thanksgiving night. He told officers he "had to do it" in self-defense.

Attacks Defense

Relentlessly Thursday Tulsa county Prosecutor Holly Anderson battered at that plea and at the defense contention of temporary insanity.

Jack Snedden, a former friend of the defendant and Crandall (Beebe) Morton, wealthy Indian youth, said Kennamer set the mark of death on Gorrell before he died. Floyd Huff, Kansas City aviator, who knew Kennamer only during an automobile drive from Kansas City to Tulsa, testified that Kennamer said he planned to kill Gorrell a week before his death.

All agreed that alleged motive was the same—that Kennamer told them Gorrell had conceived an extortion plot against the family of Homer F. Wilcox in which Miss Wilcox, winsome and popular daughter of the wealthy Tulsa oilman, was to be one of the victims.

Snedden was first on the stand to tell of wrestling, with Morton, a knife from Kennamer the night of the slaying.

"He told me Gorrell was the head of a Kansas City gang," Snedden testified. "He told me he would kill Gorrell to stop the kidnaping. He told me not to tell Virginia but I told her the next day."

Cross-examined by A. Flint Moss, chief defense lawyer, Snedden said Kennamer made such remarks when he "was both drunk and sober."

Took His Knife

Morton, heir to oil millions from Indian reservation wells, related an incident at "Jellybean Center," the juvenile meeting place of Tulsa.

Morton told how he and Snedden wrested from Kennamer rubber gloves and a knife with which they asserted he said he planned to stab Gorrell.

"Then he said, holding his hand

Peaceful Protest Is Made Against Shutting Down of FERA Work

FORT SMITH, Ark.— (AP) —Several hundred persons participated in a demonstration Thursday against the Federal Emergency Relief Administration's shutdown of relief projects in Sebastian county, ordered as the result of agitation for a general strike among relief workers.

The shutdown threw 3,200 relief beneficiaries out of jobs and many of these joined in a parade through the city.

"We Protest Relief Cut" and "We Strike Against Hunger," read banners carried by the marchers, who included a few women and children singing "Hinky-Dinky-Parlez Vous."

"We demand and request direct federal relief while the relief offices are closed," shouted Raymond Koch from his place in the parade. Koch, a teacher of "labor problems" in Commonwealth College, Mena, Ark., was temporarily detained two days ago by officers inquiring into the agitation for a relief strike.

Singing and waving banners and flags, the demonstrators moved through traffic in orderly style, finally dispersing before the closed relief administration headquarters.

Hope Turns Back Waldo 44 to 26

Locals Defeat Columbia County Team After Losing Twice Before

The Hope High School basket loopers Thursday night tumbled the Waldo quintet from its perch in Southwest Arkansas cage standings with a decisive 44 to 26 victory.

In two previous encounters the Waldo team had nosed out the Bobcats by slim margins.

Cheered by the return of several players to the lineup who have been suffering from measles, the Bobcats put the "heat" on Waldo here Thursday night and blazed their way to the most impresisve triumph this season.

One of the largest crowds to witness a game here was on hand. Travis Jackson, New York Giant baseball star, was an added attraction. Jackson acted as referee.

The first quarter was very close, the lead alternating frequently. So close was the battle the teams were deadlocked seven times. The opening quarter ended 11-11.

The Bobcats pushed ahead in the second quarter which ended, Hope 22, Waldo 13. The score at the close of the third quarter, Hope 31, Waldo 23. A scoring spree in the final period sent the Bobcat total to 44 while Waldo was making only three points.

Kennedy led the Hope offense with 14 points. Turner was second with

Judge Upheld in Comment to Jury

Arkansas Attorneys Point to Difference in Jersey Procedure

LITTLE ROCK. — Average readers were interesited prmiarily in the Bruno Hauptmann jury and its verdict, but lawyers were more intrigued by Justice Trenchard's lengthy charge to the jury.

Lawyers unfamiliar with the differences between New Jersey and Arkansas laws were aghast at many of the things the presiding judges said to the jury.

Attorney General Carl E. Bailey, pointed out that New Jersey permits trial judges to charge the jury after summations by the attorneys, and permits him to review the evidence, added:

"The New Jersey system has one thing to recommend it strongly. It permits a judge to clear away for the jury all the bunk and pettifogging issues raised by attorneys and to present the meat of the evidence to them."

Fred A. Isgrig, United States attorney, commented:

"In my opinion the charge of the judge to the jury was a very clear inlication to the jury of the belief of he court that the defendant was guilty. However in those jurisdictions where the court may comment upon testimony the comment was not unreasonable and was not unfair in itself. Such a comment on the testimony under the state practice in Arkansas would be clearly reversible error, but such comment in the federal court in this jurisdiction would be considered proper and it is not probable that it would be held in a higher court to be prejudicial error, as the court before making his comment told the jurors that they were the sole judges of the facts and the evidence, of the weight of the evidence and of the credibility of witnesses.

"He further warned them that any comments that he might make would not be made for the purpose of controlling the jury in its view of the facts, but only to aid in applying the principle of law to the facts as the

Pari-Mutuel Bill Passes by Vote of 23 to 12 in Senate

Had Previously Passed House—Assured of Governor's Signature

TO PROBE BUREAU

State Banking Department Under Fire for Alleged Liquidation Fees

LITTLE ROCK—(AP)—The Arkansas senate by a vote of 23 to 12 Friday passed the Hampton house bill legalizing pari-mutuel betting on horse racing in Arkansas, taking speedy action to permit the opening of the scheduled spring meeting at Hot Springs next Friday February 22.

The senate voted to attach the emergency clause, making the bill immediate law upon the governor's signature.

The governor has indicated his approval of the measure.

The house Friday approved an investigation "to determine the manner and procedure of sale or disposition of assets of insolvent institutions under the jurisdiction of the State Banking Department since January 1, 1933.

Speaking for the resolution, Representative Warfield, of Chicot county, the resolution's author, said:

"Banking conditions in my county smell like a dead rat in a wall."

The resolution charged that "it has been rumored that one state official, or his law firm, has accepted large fees as an attorney in connection with the liquidation of insolvent banks," which may or may not be true since these fees do not pass through the state treasury."

New Double-Primary Bill

LITTLE ROCK—The double-primary system became an issue in the legislature again Thursday when the senate passed, by a vote of 18 to 16, a bill by Senator Lake to provide for a preferential primary to take the place of the run-off primary abolished by a bill passed 10 days ago to repeal the 1933 double primary law Governor Futrell signed the repeal bill, but Senator Lake redrafted a bill which would have amended the repealed act and introduced it Tuesday.

Following a sharp debate, the Senate passed Senate Bill 47 by Johnson and others to integrate the state bar and to regulate the practice of law. The vote was 23 to 9.

A bill by Senator Holloway to permit redemption of lands forfeited for non-payment of spjecial improvement district taxes upon payment of one year's tax without penalty or interest, when the district is not in default in bond payments, and upon payment of one year's tax immediately and all remaining delinquent taxes in five annual instalments when the district is in default, was defeated, 18 to 10.

Senator Holloway contended the bill would provide needed relief for property owners without distrurbing the bond obligations of districts, but Senators Shaver, Ward of Independence and Johnson opposed it on the ground that it would give delinquent property owners an unfair advantage over those who have paid their improvement district assessments.

Senator Shaver said he would join Senator Holloway in sponsoring an-

Varicose Veins Caused By Pressure, Inaction

The veins are the blood vessels, near the surface of the skin, which carry the blood back toward the heart after the arteries have carried the blood into the tissues to supply them with nutrition.

The veins in the leg have valves which permit the flow of blood only in the direction of the heart. If it were not for this fact, the blood would tend to drop backward by the force of gravity, or to become stagnant.

As it is, the pressure sometimes is so great that the valves break down and sometimes the walls of the veins stretch. Also, because of this pressure, the veins lengthen and curl. When they get into this shape, they are called varicose veins.

The most frequent appearance of varicose veins of the body are those in the leg, in the sex apparatus of the male, and in the end of the rectum. When varicose veins occur in association with the sex structures of the male, the condition is called a varicocele. Varicose veins in the end of the rectum are called hemorrhoids.

One of the reasons for development of varicose veins in the legs is, of course, lack of exercise. Every movement of the leg muscle compresses the veins and causes the blood to move on, while the valves prevent its return.

Another cause of breakdown of the valves in these veins is the increased amount of pressure from above brought about by straining or by lifting heavy ofjects. In the case of pregnant women, the increased pressure in the abdomen is associated with the appearance of varicose veins in the legs.

In men, varicose veins are most common among those whose occupations keep them long on their feet; for example, motormen, ticket collectors, salesmen, elevator operators, and those in similar occupations.

There are cases in which the varicose veins break down and ulcerate. This occurs particularly when the condition is of long standing, and when a scratch or bruise breaks the skin near the varicose vein.

Another serious condition results when inflammation occurs in a varicose vein and in the wall of such a vein. In such conditions, clots may form, the flow of the blood may be obstructed, and frequently secondary infection may spread elsewhere in the body.

Nowadays it is unwise to permit varicose veins to presist or become worse. There are many methods of treatment.

For prevention of varicose veins elastic stockings may be worn. These may be purchased so thin as to be hardly visible. Another method of treatment is surgical removal.

The third method, or the one most popular, is injection. In this method certain substances injected into the vein bring about oblieration of the vein itself. There are always extra veins which can take up the circulation deeper in the tissues.

Lincoln Would Hew Career Even Today

If Lincoln lived today, as a boy, it is interesting to speculate on how he would spend his time, intriguing to picture what he might be like in a highly standardized world.

In his way he was radical, as everyone is radical who refuses to succumb to limitations and uses his wits and his courage for his own and his neighbor's betterment, radical in his individualism, too, relying on it when the final test came and a world problem rested on his shoulders.

Today, whether or not we think he did right in calling out troops to keep a nation united, whether or not we agree with the economists about that cataclysm of the Civil War, the fact remains that he took the responsibility at the risk of his popularity, and, as it happened, his life. He had the courage of his convictions, could stand enemies, had a gift for selection, and was, in short, the product of hardship plus self discipline.

What About Today's Boys

How many such boys are we producing today? Are there any? Are there a hundred? Are there a million? Any of these answers might be right. The qualities of leadership are the very things our system of education has tried to instill. Not always leadership of people, but of self and circumstances. The latter come first in any case.

Conditions being so far removed from the pioneer days when a boy through sheer initiative and determination could get ahead, it is almost impossible for us to conceive what would happen to the Boy Lincoln today. He might be splitting rails in a CCC camp, or studying grammar in a night school. As far as that goes, it would make little difference. What would matter is character.

What Would Lincoln Do?

If you don't mind, I will assume for the sake of argument that Lincoln, or his counterpart, is living today in a little tenement, his father on part time work, his mother ill, the hunt for a job for himself fruitless and all the neighbors in a lethargy of despair about the future.

He is still formative and therefore susceptible to opinion. He listens to everyone blaming capital and government and business and political pull. But he quietly makes a decision. Two. He decides not to let a situation he cannot control sour him or discourage him, but to be patient. And as he cannot make conditions any different in the big world, he will try to make them better in his small one. He starts in to take care of the house, his mother, his sisters and brothers.

Keeping Busy

He has, we will say, a high school education. There is a deep-set longing in his heart to be a doctor and vote himself to research. He knows a doctor not far away who works among the poor. He has a car and cannot afford a driver. Our Lincoln offers to drive him evenings and as often as possible through the day, if the doctor will let him read his books. He does not know where it will take him, but he leaves that to the future and opportunity. If he is a Lincoln he will make the most of it, not by maneuvering and connivance, but by giving himself heart and soul to whatever there is at his hand to do. Service, and acceptance of life without loss of self respect and personal pride.

Singleness of purpose, but a purpose that can bear change, disadvantage and vissisitudes. This would be, I think, our Lincoln of today. The building of those qualities in youth that make for future accomplishment and success. It is the only real radicalism, the highest idealism. The kind that refuses to join forces in blame, but looks to self as its own savior.

WHERE? Collector of internal revenue for the district in which the person lives or has his principal place of business.

HOW? See instructions on forms 1040A and 1040.

WHAT? Four per cent normal tax on the amount of net income in excess of the personal exemption, credit for dependents, earned income credit, dividends of domestic corporations subject to taxation, and interest on obligations of the United States and obligations of instrumentalities of the United States. Surtax on surtax net income in excess of $4,000.

No. 7
Husband and Wife May File Joint or Separate Returns

Husband and wife living together may each make a separate return of the income of each, or their income may be included in a single joint return. If a joint return is filed, such return is treated as a return of a taxable unit, and the income disclosed is subject to both the normal tax and the surtax. If a joint return is not made by an agent of the taxpayers it must be signed by both husband and wife and sworn to before a proper officer by the spouse preparing the return, or if neither or both prepare the return then by both spouses.

Where separate returns are filed by husband and wife, the joint personal exemption of $2,500 may be taken by either or divided between them in any proportion as agreed upon. In certain cases it would be to the advantage of the couple if they should file separate returns and one spouse claim the total joint personal exemption. In the following examples, which illustrate this point, the husband has a net income of $4,700, all of which represents earned net income, and the wife has a seporate net income of $2,500, not earned net income.

Computation—Separate Returns

Net income, husband	$4,700.00
Less personal exemption	2,500.00
Balance (surtax net income)	2,200.00
(No surtax applicable since amount is less than $4,000)
Earned income credit	470.00
Net income subject to normal tax	1,730.00
Husband's normal tax at 4 per cent	69.20
Net income, wife	2,500.00
Less personal exemption	None
Net income subject to normal tax	2,500.00
Wife's normal tax at 4 per cent	100.00
Total tax of husband and wife	169.20

Computation—Joint Return

Net income, husband and wife	$7,200.00
Less personal exemption	2,500.00
Balance (surtax net income)	4,700.00
Earned income credit (10 per cent of earned income, $4,700)	470.00
Net income subject to normal tax	4,230.00
Surtax at 4 per cent on amount in excess of $4,00 but not over $,600, 4 per cent on $700	28.00
Normal tax, 4 per cent on $4,230	169.20
Total tax, joint return of husband and wife	197.20

It will be nothed that the difference in tax resulting from the filing of separate returns amounts to $28 in the above computations.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Alicia Hart

Putting Up Braids Is Good Style of Hairdress Still

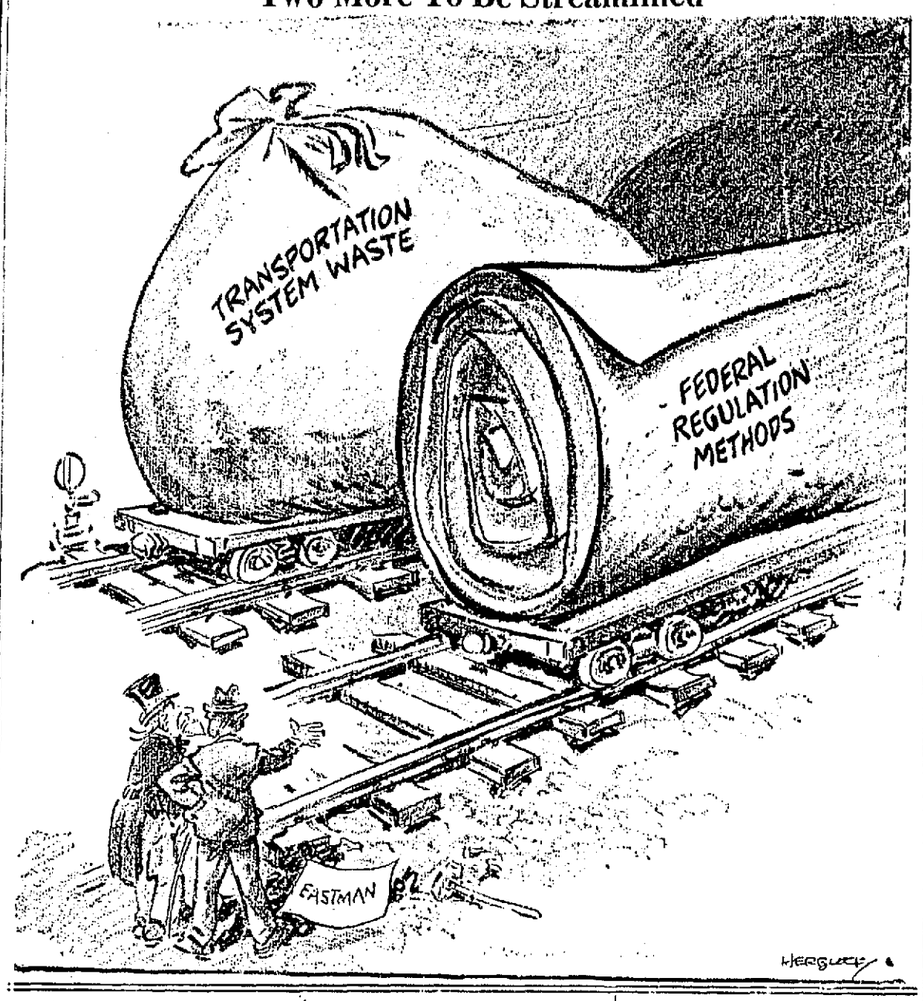

The coronet coiffure—long a favorite and still flattering to almost any woman—proves conclusively that simple hair styles always have been and always will be good. You don't have to go in for intircate waves and swirls in order to look charming and up-to-date. With a halo braid wrapped around your head you can forget about unusual arrangements, resting assured that your hair looks attractive.

Of course, a coronet hairdress is particularly becoming to tall, rather stately girls. However, unless she's very short and plump, practically any woman will find it not only attractive, but easy to keep neat throughout the day. Furthermore, it's a joy to anyone who is trying to let her hair grow. She can tuck up the straggling ends, pin on a thick braid made from hair that was cut off years ago and, providing the job is carefully done and the braid matches perfectly, simply forget about the horrors of that awkward length.

If you have long hair, you can part in the middle from forehead to back of the neck, braid each side and then wrap the two braids around your head, pinning them securely. If your face is long or if you don't like a center part, mark one high on the right side, draw the hair softly back, and, without disturbing the smooth line across the crown of your head, arrange two braids. If you like, make small ringlet curls over one ear.

SILKEN SPINDLES

by Laura Lou Brookman © 1935 NEA SERVICE, INC.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

GALE HENDERSON, pretty and 23, works in a silk mill. She and her 12-year-old brother, Phil, support their invalid father.

STEVE MEYERS, who also works in the mill, asks Gale to marry him. She promises to give him an answer in a few days.

Gale goes skating, breaks through the ice and is rescued by BRIAN WESTMORE, whose father now dead, built the mill. Brian has come home after two years in Paris to enter the mill. Gale disappears before he learns her name.

VICKY THATCHER, daughter of ROBERT THATCHER, general manager of the mill, schemes to captivate Brian.

Gale, at work in the mill, is summoned to the office of MISS GROVES, personnel director. Miss Groves makes it plain that if Gale will pass on information about her fellow employes it will be to her advantage. Gale refuses.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXVI

FOR a week Gale went to the mill, expecting that every day would bring a dismissal slip. But nothing happened—nothing out of the ordinary. Willie O'Connor, trying to climb on the roof of the old Willis place, fell and sprained an ankle and had to hobble about on an improvised crutch.

Katie Shantz surprised everyone by going over to Crystal City one night and marrying the young man she had been going around with for three months. Both of them kept on working at the mill—Katie, bright-eyed and wearing a ring with a sparkling set in it that had been bought for "$5 down."

The other girls discussed Katie's romance, but Gale had little to say. She wasn't looking well. Her father noticed this and asked anxiously if she was eating enough. Gale said she was, though it was true she had little appetite. She had trouble going to sleep nights and, when she did, slept restlessly, tormented by dreams.

Miss Groves figured in these dreams frequently and so did Leota Boller. One night Gale thought that she was in a forest and had lost her way. It was growing darker every moment and she was becoming frightened. All at once she heard a fearful growling. She began to run, not knowing where she was going, but deeper and deeper into the woods. The growling continued and seemed to draw nearer. Gale looked back and saw a lion, running with its mouth open, its cruel teeth glittering. She ran faster and faster and all at once the trees disappeared and she was on a high cliff. She kept on running, the lion drawing closer. It was so close now that she could hear its breathing. She reached the edge of the cliff and, looking down, saw water churning against the rocks below. She turned and suddenly the lion was Miss Groves. Miss Groves was wearing her blue dress with white at her throat and about the wrists and she had a rose in her hair. She came forward, smiling, and said, "I love young people, my dear. And you are young. Beautifully young! That's why I'm going to push you over this cliff. That's why—"

GALE sat up in the darkness. She was cold and for an instant did not know where she was. Then she realized what had happened. It was a dream, of course—a silly, disgusting dream. She was here in her own room, in her own bed. There was no cliff and no Miss Groves.

The bed coverings lay in a twisted heap on the floor. Gale pulled them up, smoothed them into place and lay down again. But it was a long time before she could go to sleep. The dream had been ridiculous but it had been startlingly real. And though Miss Groves might not push her off a cliff she might, next day, do something equally perilous. She might take her job away from her.

"I mustn't keep thinking about it," Gale told herself. "It doesn't do any good."

She thought about it next day, though, when she saw Leota Boller in the cafeteria. Gale turned away quickly, hoping Leota had not seen her, but a minute later the other girl was beside her.

"Hello," Leota said. "Where've you been keeping yourself lately? I haven't seen you for a long time."

"Well, we'll have to get together some time," Leota went on brightly. "Some night after work, or maybe Sunday. Are you going to be busy next Sunday?"

"I'm afraid I am," Gale told her.

"Well, I'll see you later anyhow. Got to run along now—"

Leota drifted away. Josie Grid ley set down her cup of coffee and looked at Gale. "I don't see why you have anything to do with a tattle-tale like her," Josie said.

"I don't want to."

The other girl's eyes narrowed wisely. "There's things going on around here," she said, "a lot of people would give a good deal to know about."

"What things?"

"I'll tell you some time, but not now. And don't think I don't know what I'm talking about!"

"You usually do," Gale assured her.

SUDDENLY Josie had a new interest. "Listen, Gale," she said, "do you think there'd be any way to fix over that old brown crepe o' mine to make it look sort of different? I've worn it two winters, but the material's still good. I thought maybe I could get a piece of plaid and put a collar on it and maybe a belt. Do you think so?"

"I don't see why you couldn't," Gale told her.

"Well, will you help me with it? I'm not very good at cutting things out. I got a pattern magazine the other day and it's got some swell styles in it. If I come over tonight and bring the dress will you look at it and see what you think I could do with it?"

"Why, of course."

"Then I'll come. After dinner, around 8 o'clock."

"All right," Gale said. "I'll be looking for you."

A girl in a green wool dress crossed the room and paused beside the table where the girls sat. She was a stenographer from the business office. She looked from one to the other and said, "Is one of you Gale Henderson?"

"I am," Gale told her.

The girl said, "When you've finished your lunch will you stop in the main office?"

Gale's heart missed a beat. She said then, in a low, level voice, "I've finished. I'll go right away."

She followed the girl across the cafeteria, wondering how many people were watching her. She wondered why it happened that she was going to get the notice at noon instead of at the end of the day's work. It didn't make any difference, of course. It was strange, now that it had happened, now that she knew she was to be discharged, that she didn't feel worse about it. She walked down the corridor beside the girl in green and thought, "Everything's going on, just the way it was—"

"In here," the other girl said, opening a door. "If you'll sit down I'll tell Mr. Westmore you're here."

GALE turned, bewildered and opened her mouth to ask a question, but the girl had gone into a private office opening from the larger one. A moment later she was back.

"Mr. Westmore is ready to see you," she said. "You can go right in."

"But Mr. Westmore—"

"He's ready to see you," the girl repeated, and went to a desk before which she sat down.

Gale walked to the private office and pushed the door open. She saw Brian Westmore sitting at a desk inside, saw him get to his feet and come forward, smiling.

"Come on in," he said, eagerly "Glad to see you—"

The door closed behind Gale. "I don't understand," she said slowly. "Was it you who sent for me?"

"Of course. It's been a long time since I've seen you and this was the only way I could think of to arrange it. I asked Miss Young to bring you here. Hope you don't mind breaking into your lunch hour—it seemed the simplest time." Suddenly he stopped. "Why what in the world is the matter?" he asked.

Gale couldn't help it. There were tears in her eyes—tears of relief. She turned away, to hide them, groped in a pocket for her handkerchief. She said, "It's nothing—"

"But there is something! I wish you'd tell me what it is."

"It's nothing," Gale repeated, shaking her head. "I thought—when that girl said for me to come to the main office I thought I was going to be—fired. I'm just crying because I'm so—glad!"

The handkerchief was not in her pocket. Gale tried to blink the tears away, tried without success.

"Here," Brian said, "take this handkerchief." He gave her a large one from his coat pocket. "I was an idiot," he said contritely. "I didn't mean to frighten you. Why, I wouldn't do that for the world! Please don't feel that way about it. Please—" He put a hand on her shoulder, comforting, encouraging.

The outer door opened and Vicky Thatcher stood on the threshold.

Failures

'Tis better to have tried in vain,
Sincerely striving for a goal,
Than to have lived upon the plain
An idle and timid soul.
'Tis better to have fought and spent
Your courage, missing all applause,
Than to have lived in smug content
And never ventured for a cause.
For he who tries and fails may be
The founder of a better day;
Though never his the victory,
From him shall others learn the way.—E. A. G.

Weekly Sunday School Lesson

Text: 1 Peter 2:11-17; 4:1-5
The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for February 17

By WM. E. GILROY, D. D.
Editor of Advance

From narrative and incident in the life of Peter, we turn to consider some of Peter's teachings and counsels to the early Christians, as contained in a letter to the churches. The emphasis in this temperance lesson is upon abstinence from evil an upon good behavior.

The Christian was in an unique and difficult position in the ancient world, as he is in some measure in the world of today. He had given his heart and mind to a heavenly kingdom and to heavenly ideals while still living in an earthly situation, surrounded by people whose religion and ideals were pagan.

With this pagan religion and its ideals, all manner of things were consistent that are not consistent with purity of life and integrity of human relationships. The ancient cities and society in which these Christians lived were permeated with licentious low.

Hence it was necessary constantly practices. The standards of life were to warn the Christians against the ways of the world and to turn their eyes to the holiness of Christian living.

These Christians lived under political conditions where their very faith was apt to mark them for persecution. Therefore, it was all the more necessary that they should obey the law and give allegiance to rulers in everything in which their consciences could permit them to do so.

In general, Peter suggested that Christians should show the superiority of their faith and life by the quality of their living. They were men who had come into a great freedom; only they must use their freedom not as a privilege to offend their fellow men, but rather as an occasion of love and service.

Peter admonished them to fear God and to honor the king. It is not difficult to fear God, but is is not always easy to honor kings. Kings have not always shown themselves worthy of much honor, and though we have no king in a democracy, our rulers and statesmen do not always command our respect.

Yet we ought to have respect for all that rulers and statesmen themselves should stand for. If our laws are not right, if our political leaders are not men of integrity and honor and wisdom, we show the proper attitude of reverence toward law and government by doing all in our power to make them right.

The Christian should never permit himself to become cynical as a citizen. It is upon the quality of his faith and vision that the hope of a country depends. He must train his vision not upon the things that are defective in the world, but upon the glory of the Christ who came to make things right.

The deepest contribution he can make is to make his own life worthy, to avoid the evils that corrupt and destroy individuals and nations, and to find the satisfaction of life in seeking to live according to the will of God.

It is the way of disciplined living that is the way alike of true happiness and of security for individuals and nations.

PARI-MUTUEL BILL

other measure that would provide relief without setting up unfair discrimination.

Little Discussion

When Senator Lake called up his preferential primary bill, there was no spoken opposition to it and only three senators spoke for it, the author and Senators Featherston and Livingston. Senators Cole and Barney asked whether the sponsors did not think it would be a good idea to "let the dead stay dead." Senator Featherston said he thought this question was not as dead as some of the senators appeared to think and Senator Lake said a representative implored him to redraft the bill, originally offered to amend the 1933 run-off primary law which was repealed last week, and to try to pass it. He quoted this unidentified representative as saying he "caught hell when he went home" because the run-off law was repealed.

The Lake bill would provide that when there are only two candidates for the nomination for any office, or only twice as many candidates as the number of places to be filled in cases where two or more senators or representatives are to be elected in the same district or county, names of such candidates shall not be placed on the ballot until the second primary.

This provision, in effect would make the first primary a preferential election, except that if any candidate received a majority in the first primary, he would be nominated and his name would not appear on the ballot at the second primary.

Senator Lake said the provision would eliminate 90 per cent of the objection that developed to the run-off primary law at its first trial in the primary elections last summer.

Voting against the bill was John L. Wilson, of Hope.

Bar Incorporated

A lengthy debate developed on Senate Bill 47, by Johnson and others, to provide for "integration" of the state bar. It was passed, 23 to 9, after a motion to defer it for amendment lost on a tie vote, 17 to 17.

Senators Johnson, Levine, Armstrong, Ellis, Ashley, Ward of Independence and Evans spoke for the bill and Senators Cole, Gilbert, Featherston and Norrell against it.

The debate was somewhat complicated by a motion by Senator Cole, after two or three had spoken for the bill, to place it back on second reading for amendment. He said he desired to offer an amendment to provide for jury trial of lawyers charged in disbarment proceedings growing out of alleged violation of regulations of the Bar Association. He said he thought "lawyers should be given the same shake as a horse thief."

The argument then was supposed to be switched from the merits of the bill to the Cole motion, but considerable leeway was allowed and the bill as a whole was discussed.

Supporters of the bill contended that members of the bar charged with violation of rules or statutes governing that profession should be tried without a jury, as is the practice under existing law. They pointed out that lawyers charged with violation of criminal statutes would be tried before a jury as are other offenders.

Senator Gilbert said he wanted to offer an amendment to prevent claim agents for corporations from chasing ambulances. Senator Norrell said he would support the bill, if amended to protect the public against activities of agents of corporations.

Senator Cole closed the debate for his motion with an appeal for the privilege of amending the bill and Senator Johnson closed in support of the measure.

jury might find the facts to be.

"He further warned them that they should not consider his memory of the evidence as accurate, but that they must depend upon their own recollections. He told them they must consider all the evidence in the case. In view of these cautionary instructions and explanations of the court, I do not think the charge contained prejudicial error. On the whole, the charge showed a very clear conception and memory of the facts and evidence in this case. It is the strongest case of circumstanital evidence that I have ever seen."

A lawyer confirmed the report that attorneys were greatly interested in the charge. He was Arthur G. Frankel, whose own opinion was that "it amounted to a directed verdict of guilty, and would be ground for reversal in Arkansas."

FRIENDS TURN ON

open and empty:

"'Are you going to send me out to kill a man empty-handed?' And I gave him the knife back a moment," Morton testified.

Kennamer leaned forward with interest.

"Then I thought it over and told Phil I thought I'd better take the knife away, and I did."

Moss, cross-examined, elicited from the witness the statement that Kennamer did not resist either effort to take the knife.

Defense Opens Case

Kennamer was painted as a love-sick youth—brilliant but erratic—whose obsession that he was the protector of a pretty girl led him to slay a friend he thought was menacing her.

Young Kennamer was portrayed by his attorney, A. Flint Moss, as the one "black sheep" in the family of Judge Franklin E. Kennamer of Tulsa.

Bruno Declares He Told All He Knew

Prisoner Protests Innocence in Interview Following Conviction

FLEMINGTON, N. J.—(AP)—Sheriff John H. Curtiss announced Friday that Bruno Richard Hauptmann, convicted Lindbergh kidnap-murderer, would be removed to the Trenton death-house some time Saturday.

Reaffirms Innocence

FLEMINGTON, N. J.—(AP)—Bruno Richard Hauptmann, haggard and shaken by the death sentence pronounced upon him for the Lindbergh baby murder, still cried out "Innocent" Thursday night as his lawyer mapped appeal plans and he awaited removal to the death house at Trenton.

Hauptmann said, "If I have to go to the electric chair, I go like a man."

He was asked if he had "any confession to make."

"If I had any confession to make I would have made it months ago and saved my wife and child all this worry," he told newsmen.

Two reporters, representing all the newspapers and press associations, entered the jail for the interview.

They found Hauptmann pacing his cell in his undershirt.

He told them he was depending on his lawyers and the public to finance an appeal.

"I haven't a dollar and must depend on the public to help me. I am depending on my lawyers to get the money," he said.

Hauptmann said he was satisfied with his jail treatment.

"My guards are excellent; Lieut. Allen Smith is fine; Hovey Low is one of the nicest persons I ever met," he told his interviewers.

Lieutenant Smith is the state police officer who has been in charge of Hauptmann's guard ever since he was brought to New Jersey. Low is the deputy sheriff who accompanied Bruno to court each day and stood behind the witness chair as the defendant testified.

"I am worn out but I feel all right. Absolutely. I am innocent. Otherwise I would have said so in the beginning.

"If they were to come to me in my cell and say 'you would go free if you would tell the whole story' I would say I told everything I know on the witness stand," Hauptmann insisted.

By HARRY GRAYSON

NEW YORK—Usually something has to be done about most sports, but here's a brand-new one in need of reform.

It's girls' basketball.

Have you any idea that Maxie Baer was rough, the night he smacked King Levinsky? Or that Joe Savoldi is indelicate in picking up the shaggy Man Mountain Dean, or some other behemoth, and catapulting him into the sixth and seventh pews? Or that piling up in football is something to be deplored? Or that cracking a hockey stick over an adversary's cranium is anything out of the way?

If so, you haven't seen anything until you take a peek at girls' interclub and interscholastic basketball competition in and around Manhattan and especially on Long Island. Those Long Island lassies seem to play for keeps.

When Walter Okeson, eastern football commissioner, canceled Dr. Eddie O'Brien's assignments last fall, the renewed Boston referee charged that an official could be blackballed by a coach or graduate manager.

Dr. O'Brien's dodge was comparatively soft, however. He never suffered the humiliation of being "booed from the scene of action, or ganged, for that matter, by a horde of irate men and boy spectators," which frequently has happened to women referees of basketball battles of the fair ones on Long Island, according to one of the sports writing sob sisters who follows the hoop skirts there.

Homers Preferred As Game Gals Gird

Women basketball officials of Manhattan lead a migratory life.

"You are never asked back to officiate for the school or club that loses," says one of them. "If you were sought by Team A and Team B wins, you're finished as far as Team A is concerned, but you will immediately be sought by Team B for its next game."

Talk about football coaches who win at any cost!

"The same hysterical attiude that drives coaches to engage only referees under whom their teams win, and drives audiences to turn violent under an imagined favoritism, drives girl players to a hysterical degree of physical sacrifice on the altar of winning," asserts the sports-ring sob sister.

"It is a repeated occurrence that girls play through interclub and certain interscholastic matches until they drop in a dead faint. In one instance last year a center dropped, despite several pauses in play called by the referee to save her, and did not come to for an hour.

"Many times players, recently out of grippe sickbeds, and in other conditions unfit for even mild competition, are used to their exhausted limit in matches because they are the best players for their posts, and the games must be won.

"Heart defects result from such overstrain and mar the girls' later years."

Pipes, Anyway, If Not a Pipe Dream

In the old days much strees was laid on the unfavorable conditions under which athletes competed and prepared. Women's basketball is a throwback, it appears.

"Within recent years I have seen girls' teams in the metropolitan area play in smoke-darkened cellar gymnasiums, surrounded by jeeding, hooting crowds, which pressed over the sidelines, thrusting the players back on the floor when they exhausedly fell into the pack," relates the commentator.

Kneeing and other tricks are not unknown in women's basketball, either. "I have seen girls play until opponents gave them a knee in tipoffs that laid them on sanded cement floors, to be carried out to lie for long half hours under dripping rusted pipes with no medically qualified soul to help them get over their convulsive cramped muscles and, sometimes, unconsciousness," continues the report.

"Lists of tuberculosis patients in hospitals, or graduate girls ill in many equally serious respects, all provenly as a result of injurious basketball activities, are available."

If the sports-writing sob sister isn't more hysterical than some of the players, we'll simply have to make a round of those metropolitan courts. That is, if the police don't stop it first.

Beach Togs Worn in Smart Southern Resorts Are Easy to Warm Up To

The pareo bathing ensemble, inspired by the costumes that the natives of Tahiti wear, is popular at smart southern resorts. Nearly all pareos are fashioned from dark cottons, printed in large white or pastel floral designs. Left to right at the Surf Club, Miami Beach, Fla., are Leontine McGregor of Detroit, Betty Judson of Dallas and Marjorie Brooker of Miami.

Old-fashioned plaid gingham is used to make this new and flattering bathing suit that includes shorts and brassiere, fastened together with suspender straps. It adorns Dorothy Perkins of New York at the Surf Club in Miami Beach, Fla.

Ms. Barclay H. Warburton, Jr., of Philadelphia graced the Surf Club's beach in this stunning ensemble. It is of sky blue lustrous silk and covers a bathing suit of the same material. It can be draped in three different ways.

THE NEW DEAL IN WASHINGTON

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON.—An epidemic of New Deal resignations, threatened or already submitted, has stirred up the latest backstage hubbub here.

All the king's horses and all the king's men have been used to keep the National Labor Relations Board from walking out in protest against its own futility and White House "interference." Two of its three members had actually resigned when the administration began to apply its pressure.

Two members of the National Industrial Recovery Board threatened to resign at the meeting of the board which was told that Roosevelt had ignored most of its majority recommendations for revision of the NRA automobile code. It is likely, however, that these officials will also be dissuaded.

The common background is the dispute between the automobile industry and organized labor, which dates back to the birth of NRA and Section 7-a. NIRA's collective bargaining clause. Here is the inside history:

The powerful automobile and steel men consistently have refused to have any truck with the A. F. of L. They have threatened to abandon their NRA code unless the administration continues to grant them large concessions in their relations with labor.

Insists on Enforcing 7-a

The NLRB decided privately last fall that enforcement of Section 7-a was non-existent in the automobile and steel fields, despite the theoretical functioning of Dr. Leo Wolman's automobile board, specially appointed by Roosevelt in the auto strike settlement last spring and the steel board.

The NLRB held that Section 7-a should be enforced and that it could be enforced only by an agency which could step in anywhere enforcement had gone wrong.

Unanimously, NLRB, under Chairman Francis Biddle, decided to step into the automobile field and order its own elections to determine whether auto workers wanted a labor union or company union to represent them in collective bargaining. It was ready to act last December.

Labor Fumbles Chance

Auto union leaders were ready to repudiate the Wolman board and have no more to do with it. Such repudiation was a preliminary requisite to the NLRB intervention. But President Bill Green of the A. F. of L. delayed that action during a series of futile negotiations with Secretary Perkins and others.

Meanwhile, Wolman, who had said in April that his board had no power to call elections, suddenly announced elections. A. F. of L. leaders, caught off base, repudiated them and told union men not to vote.

The result, according to impartial insdiers here, was the recent huge majorities of "no affiliation" ballots, as workers feared to identify themselves as union men by refusal to vote.

The latest figures in the industry's collective bargaining ballots show 39,172 unaffiliated with any labor group; 2253 with the A. F. of L.; 2708 with independent employes' organizations; 298 with the Mechanics' Education Society; 266 with Associated Automobile Workers; and 48 scattered among three other bodies.

The A. F. of L. vote was slightly less than 5 per cent of the total cast. The automobile labor board says about 90 per cent of the workers balloted.

Board to "Lay Off"

Meanwhile NLRB carefully set a precendent for intervention in automobiles and steel by taking jurisdiction in the Jennings case, over protest of newspaper publishers who insisted the Newspaper Industrial Board had the only jurisdiction.

Every insider knew NLRB was really gunning for the automobile magnates and seeking to assert itself as a "supreme court" on 7-a.

Roosevelt, fully aware of that, publicly told the board to lay off all cases from industries for which special labor boards had been created, as in automobiles and steel. But only after Donald Richberg had vainly sought to get NLRB voluntarily to make a similar declaration of its own.

Resignations Halted

For weeks the board had sought an interview with Roosevelt. The president's letter promptly inspired the two resignations, never announced, and prospect of a third. Assurances then began to pour into the NLRB from the White House, Miss Perkins, Richberg, and even administration leaders in congress that board members should stay to help congress formulate strong labor disputes legislation.

The irony of the success of these assurances lies in the fact that Roosevelt doesn't want any new labor disputes legislation and probably will act to prevent it.

Meanwhile, every NLRB election order or Blue Eagle withdrawal issued in the last six weeks has been tied up in the courts.

Members Hillman, Marshall, Hamilton, Henderson, and Smith of the recovery board opposed the basis of Roosevelt's extension of the automobile code—made without consultation with labor leaders and apparently influenced by results of the Wolman board's elections.

They had read a sensational—and thus far suppressed—report from Henderson and Dr. Isidor Lubin, made by direction of the president, on automobile labor conditions.

FR Bars Strikes

They recommended a straight 40-hour week and elimination of the code's "merit clause." But their only contact with Roosevelt was through Chairman Clay Williams, an industrialist, who, with Member A. D. Whiteside, voted for the program of a 48-hour week and establishment of the Wolman board in the code, after it had finally been repudiated by Green.

Resignation threats came when Williams sought a last-minute endorsement of Roosevelt's agreement with the auto men.

Behind all these facts is Roosevelt's determination to permit no striks in dustries as automobiles and steel. The story would be far different had the A. F. of L. organized workers to the point where they could present a formidable threat.

Anti-Lynching Bill May Be Approved

Senate Judiciary Committee Hears Arguments for It

WASHINGTON —(AP)— An excoriation of lynching by H. L. Mencken and other witnesses Thursday caused a federal measure against the crime to gather momentum which foreshadowed approval by a senate judiciary subcommittee.

Chairman Van Nuys, Democrat, Indiana, predicted his group would report the Wagner-Costigan bill after Mencken, Baltimore writer, said no civilized government could "condone such atrocities." Senator Wagner, Democrat, New York, asserted that lynchings constitute "almost every type of infamy that blot the record of civilization."

Rewritten from the form proposed last year, the measure prescribes severe penalties for lynchers, officers who conspire with mobs or fail to protect prisoners from riotous assemblages, and counties where such lawlessness occurs.

No opposition witnesses appeared at the one-day hearing and Van Nuys said the measure probably would be recommended to the full committee soon.

Senator Dieterich, Democrat, Illinois, criticized the county-liability clause as making it possible to subject Chicago to damages "to indemnify gangland" when a gangster was taken for a ride.

Break in Controls Smashed Airship?

Wiley Thinks Torn Fabric May Have Jammed Macon's Elevators

SAN FRANCISCO.-(AP)—Intimations that a break in the controls, jammed by a piece of torn fabric, might have caused the "bad casualty" which sent the navy dirigible Macon to destruction, were heard by a naval court of inquiry Thursday.

Lieut. Commander Herbert V. Wiley, captain of the Macon testified fabric on the ship loosened whenever it became wet and that the Macon had passed through several rain storms last Monday.

Later Lieut. Commander Jesse L. Kenworthy, second in command, declared he felt a jolt, as from a severe gust of wind. Seconds later, he said, they were informed the gas cell in the stern had burst and the tail was collapsing.

Kenworthy said the guest of wind was not different from others they had encountered before. "Such guests are encountered frequently in all flying," he said. "They are not dangerous but necessitate caution be exercised so as not to lose altitude or directional control."

Vivian Johnson, of Boughton Family, Desopndent Over Loss of Eye

FRESCOTT, Ark.—Despondent because he had lost the sight of an eye in a recent accident in El Dorado and feared that he would be unable to hold a job, Vivian Johnson, employe of the Gulf Refinery company at Griffin, Union county, shot and killed himself here Thursday.

Shortly after noon, Johnson walked into the pressing shop of Burrell Whitmarsh, with whom he was acquainted, talked to Whitmarsh and others present in a casual manner for several minutes, then walked to the rear of the shop. Almost immediately a pistol shot sounded and Whitmarsh and the others rushed into the rear room to find Johnson dead with the bullet from a .45 caliber revolver through his head.

In his pocket was a note addressed to Whitmarsh in which Johnson apologized for having ended his life in Whitmarsh's shop and asked him to send for Mrs. Johnson and the couple's two children.

Johnson formerly lived near Boughton, this county.

He also is survived by four brothers, Cecil of Gladewater, Texas, P. Q. Arthur and Layland Johnson, all of Boughton; a sister, Mrs. B. W. Guin of Lubbock, Texas, and his mother, Mrs. F. J. Johnson of Boughton.

Admits He Struck Addy in Night Club

Former Official Drunk, Hit Him First, Declares Proprietor

LITTLE ROCK.—Jack Mann, 24, operator of Old Heidelberg Inn, about five miles out on the Conway highway, Thursday admitted that he struck Vincent Addy, 38, former Franklin county circuit clerk, a short time before he was found three-quarters of a mile from the inn in a dying condition early last Sunday.

Mann, his wife, Frank L. Truby, 25, Truby's wife, Ernest Sullican, 23, and two negro employes at the inn, T. H. Harris and Plummer Lovelace, remained in the Pulaski county jail Thursday night, without formal charges. Fred A. Denham, prosecuting attorney, said more witnesses would be questioned.

Mann, in a statement corroborated by several persons, insisted that Addy, in a drunken condition, had struck him twice before he retaliated. Addy, he said, walked off and was not seen again until picked up on the highway.

Addy's jaw had been fractured and his forehead crushed. An automobile truck passed over his legs after motorists discovered him. He died en route to City hospital.

Absence of bruises usually found on victims of automobile accidents, caused officers to suspect Addy had been injured elsewhere and placed on the highway.

Dr. Howard A. Dishough, deputy coroner, and Deputy Sheriff's Raper, Townes, Conner and Harris began an investigation immediately. Information that there had been a fight at the inn prior to the discovery of Addy's body and that a patron had been ejected was obtained Wednesday.

Previously operators of the inn and employes had insisted there had been no commotion. Addy disapeared after arriving at the inn with a group of friends, they had said at first.

Arthur Cutten Is Banned by Mart

Ace of Bear Traders May Appeal From Federal Decision

WASHINGTON—(AP)—An attorney's blast Thursday against the order which barred Arthur W. Cutten, called "the biggest speculator in history," from trading on the grain marts for two years was taken as indication here that the courts must pass on the federal disbarment case.

Cutten, a legendary figure in LaSalle street, Chicago, because of his grain deals, was judged guilty Thursday by the Grain Futures Commission, headed by Secretary Wallace, of concealing his trades. The two-year suspension followed.

In Chicago, Cutten was quoted at first as saying: "I won't do anything."

His lawyer, Orville J. Taylor, however, termed the disbarment "outrageous" and said that if "the ends of justice are to be served it will only be at the hands of the courts." But Taylor said it had not been decided whether Cutten would appeal the ruling.

Secretary Roper and Attorney General Cummings, other members of the commission, concurred in the decision refusing Cutten the right to trade at any American grain futures market.

In 1931, the government through the then Secretary Hyde, was begging Cutten to desist from "bear raids" in the public interest. Some of the 1931 deals figured in the charges against him did not begin until the Roosevelt administration.
